

Art Exhibit Opens Sunday

A month-long exhibition of 15 p.m. tea honoring the young paintings, drawings, and design artists. Featured at the exhibit, sponsored by students and alumni of Palos Verdes College at the P.V. Gallery, will be oil paintings by the Palos Verdes Art Association, will be oil paintings and drawings by R. Connor Everts, who, after leaving PVC, studied at the University of Washington. Everts also attended Mexico City College, where he worked on a mural under St. quirois. He is currently studying in England.

A fabric painting on display is the work of Lois Stolaroff, a PVC graduate now studying at the Yale School of Design.

Also on display will be several drawings by Burton Kessenick, a PVC graduate who subsequently attended Pomona College, where he won a sculpture award, and who is now doing graduate work at Rochester University.

A number of ink drawings, the work of Robert Eggers, also will be shown. Eggers, a PVC graduate of last year, is now taking his junior year at Los Angeles State College but plans to return to Palos Verdes to earn the bachelor degree in the College's new four-year program.

Other alumni whose work will be exhibited are Eve Tettmer, Bee Caldwell Weir, Jim Hornel, and Jim Riddell. Current students who will display their work are Tom Hernandez, Annabelle Metzler, Ronnie Rhodes, Jim Wilson, Markline Alberti, Don Clark, Nancy Waite, Marlene Bowers, and Jeanette Lopez.
